Sarcoma Knows No Borders

Sarcoma knows no borders. It can occur anywhere in the body. It doesn't discriminate based on age, gender or race, and it occurs in countries all over the world. Yet...

...sarcoma is the forgotten cancer.

What is sarcoma?

- Sarcoma is a very dangerous cancer that affects the connective tissues, such as nerves, muscles, cartilage, joints, bone, or blood vessels.
- It can arise anywhere in the body, frequently hidden deep in the limbs.

How prevalent are sarcomas?

- About 1% of all adult cancers are sarcomas.
- About 15% of all children's cancers are sarcomas.
- There are hundreds of thousands of patients and their families struggling with sarcoma worldwide.

How are sarcomas treated?

- When possible, sarcoma patients have surgery to remove the cancer.
- Surgery is often combined with chemotherapy and/or radiation.

Why are sarcomas dangerous?

- They are often misdiagnosed. Sometimes they are thought to be sports injuries.
- When they are diagnosed, they may be large and difficult to remove surgically, and they may have metastasized.
- Many sarcomas resist current treatments.
